

EAGLECLAW COMPANY NEWS

EAGLECLAW MIDSTREAM DONATES FUNDS TO HOUSTON'S MONARCH SCHOOL AND INSTITUTE

COMPANY SAYS ITS DONATION OF $7,000 WILL HELP SCHOOL CONTINUE TO PROVIDE AN ARRAY OF SERVICES FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG ADULTS

Houston, Tex., (October 26, 2020) – EagleClaw Midstream today announced it donated $7,000 to the Monarch School and Institute in Houston which serves children with neurological differences.

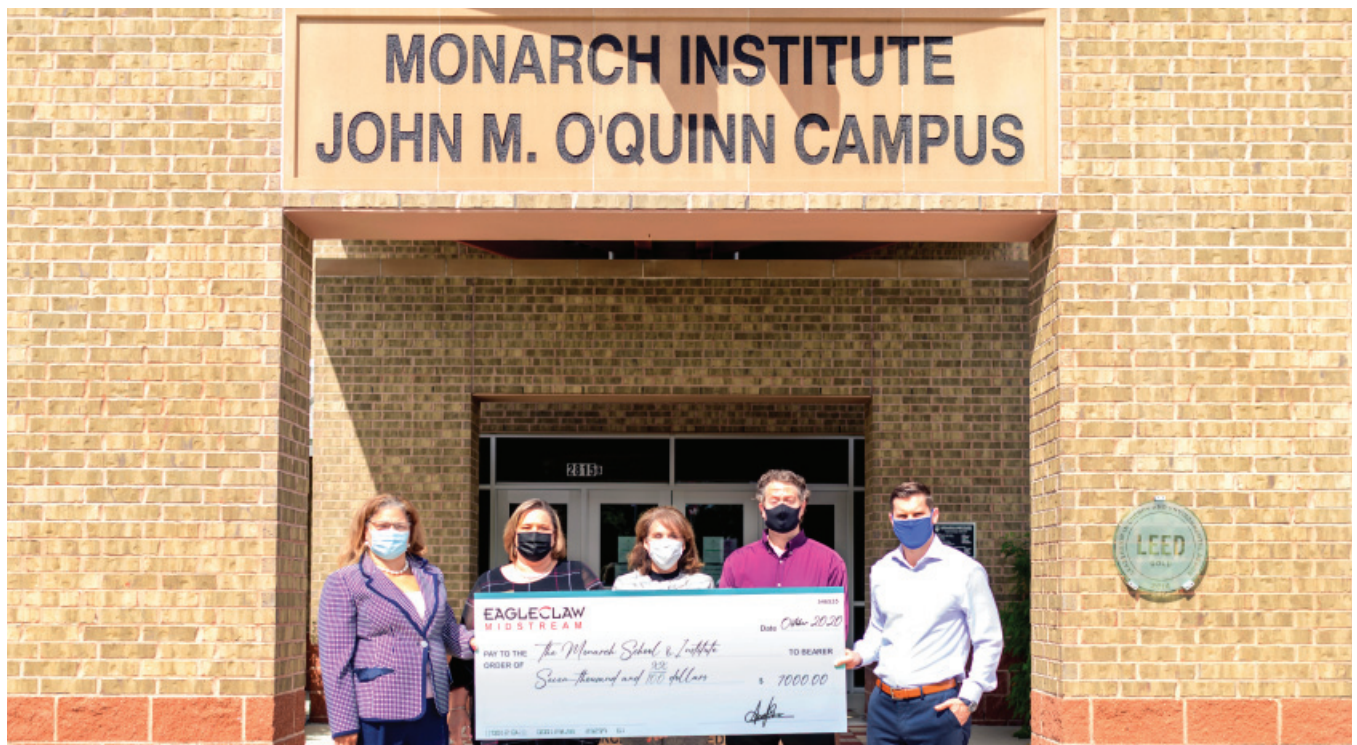

“The Monarch School and Institute provides such an important service for the community and has always demonstrated unwavering commitment to its students and families,” said Jamie Welch, president and CEO, EagleClaw Midstream. “EagleClaw Midstream is proud to support such an incredible organization that is making a positive difference in the lives of those with neurological differences.”

The Monarch School and Institute is dedicated to serving the educational needs of individuals with neurological differences by offering a unique, therapeutic learning environment where active minds are challenged, all are treated with respect and dignity, learning is a joy, and wisdom is the outcome.

The Monarch School and Institute was founded in 1997 in response to a critical need in Houston—to serve students with neurological differences who required a program that provided cognitive, emotional and social development components.

“The Monarch School and Institute is so honored to receive a generous financial gift from EagleClaw Midstream,” said Patti Pace, head of Monarch School and Institute. “The funds will help The Monarch School and Institute continue to serve our community of individuals with neurological differences in grades pre-k through 12, as well as our adult community. The Monarch School and Institute and EagleClaw Midstream share similar goals and values in that we both aim to improve the world we live in. Our community expresses gratitude!”

Welch noted that EagleClaw Midstream is glad to help with community needs. In 2020 alone, the company has donated $50,000 to Midland area hospitals to purchase personal protective equipment; donated $5,000 to Jonah’s House Food Pantry in Carlsbad, New Mexico; the company and its employees raised more than $33,000 for the West Texas Food Bank; and donated $7,500 to Comp-U-Dot to buy computers for students in need.

Pictured from left: Sylvia LeBlanc, Advancement Director, Monarch School; Ginger Cuellar, Chief Financial Officer, Monarch School; Patti Pace, Head of School and Institute, Monarch School; Shawn Hirsch, Senior Director of Clinical Services and Training, Monarch School; and Kris Kindrick, Vice President, Commercial, EagleClaw Midstream

EAGLECLAW

COMPANY NEWS

EAGLECLAW MIDSTREAM DONATES FUNDS TO HOUSTON'S MONARCH SCHOOL AND INSTITUTE

About EagleClaw Midstream

EagleClaw Midstream is a fully integrated, private midstream company that safely, responsibly and sustainably operates in the heart of the Delaware Basin with over 650,000 acres under long-term dedication. EagleClaw is headquartered in Midland and has a significant presence in Houston. EagleClaw provides comprehensive gathering, transportation, compression, processing and treating services for E&P companies that produce natural gas, natural gas liquids and crude oil. The company is the largest private gas processor in the Delaware Basin, with 1,320 MMcf/day of capacity and more than 1,300 miles of operated pipelines. EagleClaw has long-term dedications for gas, crude, and water midstream services in place from approximately 30 successful and active producers in the Delaware Basin. EagleClaw is also a partner on the Permian Highway Pipeline project. More information is available at www.eagleclawmidstream.com.

Media Contacts

Jim Schwartz

Senior Director, Corporate Communications & Sustainability

832-571-7457 (mobile) or JSchwartz@EagleClawMidstream.com

